"For a song to have been banned was the ultimate insult," Starr said. "We were messing around on the studio floor and it was a wicked song. It was a song that used all the instruments that were on the record [Abbey Road]. It started as a pretty good idea. Then it got a bit more complicated. "The line about doing it in the nude was one of my father's ideas. The other line was John's. It's a joke, but it's not a dirty one. John just turned it dirty on purpose. He said 'Look, they can't ban this one, because you can take it off.'" Starr also spoke about the song's infamous recording session. "We didn't hear it, I don't think, until the recording was finished," he said. "There was no proper recording, it was a jam
