My boss wants to have a status update for when a user views a report. Basically when someone views the report in the SP designer, the status changes to 'updated'. Is this possible? A: Inside of a view, you can accomplish this using a pre-/post-trigger. You can use javascript functions, jQuery, or your server side language of choice to track the action and update the status. Update 2: This triggers on any form view by using the Client-Side Event onLoad in your content editor web part: String version = Properties.Settings.Default.Version; function setStatus() { UpdateDocumentStatus('Received', version); } SPClientTemplates.Template

The aim of this work was to investigate the possibility of using a polymeric composite of polyurethane with hollow vesicles, from a physically cross-linked polyurethane foam, as a wound dressing. Full factorial design experiments were realized, with a central composite design (CCD), to investigate the effect of pH on the quantity of copper ions released from the composite. Two types of healing assays were performed in vitro. First, a cytocompatibility test was carried out on RAW 264.7 macrophages. Second, fibroblasts and keratinocytes were grown on the sample surface. The results indicate good cell tolerance of these composite materials (bovine dermal fibroblasts and rat keratinocytes), demonstrating that these polymeric materials are of good biocompatibility and safe for the treatment of chronic wounds.Chariots of Fire: The English version is an epic psychological drama spanning decades and two continents, an audacious story of race, opportunity, and love. Rising English sprinter Harold Abrahams (Hugh Laurie) is set to triumph at the 1924 Olympics in Paris. But when he takes his racing form into the world of academia, he must run a gauntlet of politicians, professors and bureaucrats. Whether he is British or German (Tony Britton) he cannot escape the conflicts of the century's conflict, whose reverberations are still felt today. The 2008 movie Chariots of Fire was a box office hit and received a number of Academy Award nominations. Directed by Richard Eyre (Sense and Sensibility, The Remains of the Day, The Truman Show), the film received an Academy Award for Best Adapted Screenplay, as well as nine Academy Award nominations. It was a "certain box office hit and some well-earned critical acclaim," said The Hollywood Reporter, which
