This results in new player attributes, like increased footwork intelligence, a new heading mechanics and a more fluent and more accurate dribbling AI. The technical aspects of the game can be seen on EA Sports FIFA 12 demo Video at EA Play Expo: FIFA 16™ received three major gameplay upgrades, including Shot Intelligence, Player Connections and “Player Positioning”. In FIFA 17 the trend continues, and you can see the evolution of our game engine in this infographic: Ever wondered what’s the technical underpinnings of FIFA 17? Then look no further, as this video by Next Issue, EA’s technology partner for video games, explains everything: The FIFA series has featured breathless players since FIFA 3, now we will bring that to the player by more accurately mimicking authentic movement and the flow of the game, improving the tactical strategy of the team and making it easier for players to make a difference on the pitch, like never before. Many of these improvements are exclusive to FIFA 17 and can only be found in the game, including: - Player Connections, for better player interactions and new, authentic reactions - including the celebration pose and more realistic dead-ball interactions such as goal kicks, long passes and passes while in the air - Increased movement speed and ball control in the run and jump action - players now balance the need for speed while maintaining the need to recover energy. This results in a faster, more fluent and more accurate dribbling player, making the game more fun to play. - Player Positioning - Soccer AI has been enhanced throughout the pitch, affecting player runs, kicking behaviour, ball-control, crosses, shots, goal-kicks and more. Additionally, improved gameplay results from unopposed headers, when the player with ball control in the opponent's penalty area - a strategic advantage in the final third of the pitch - can intercept passes and look to counter-attack. We want to make it easier for players to make a difference on the pitch, and improve tactical decision making. This FIFA 17 showcase event, moderated by FIFA/EA SPORTS Hitzones anchor Jean-Luc de Biasio, is an opportunity for players of all skill levels to demo FIFA 17.
