A heroes quest into the Dungeon that is a labyrinth of danger. The game centers on the journey of a small party of five intrepid adventurers on a great quest to experience fame, fortune, and glory! What are you waiting for? Get ready to face your destiny in the dungeons of Xolotl, and have fun! Alaskan Spruce Cotton Alaskan Spruce Cotton (ACU16) is a cactus-like shrub with spiny leaves, the epitome of which is that it has a trunk and, unlike all other cacti, bears flowers that open outwards, with one petal of each flower having a yellow centre. It grows in abundance in the Mendel Ice Piedmont of coastal Alaska.

of clear cell sarcoma: a case report and review of literature. Clear cell sarcoma (CCS) of soft tissues is a rare malignancy of uncertain etiology. We present the case of a 22-year-old man with a clear cell sarcoma of the skeletal muscle and review the findings on imaging and pathologic studies. This tumor has a characteristic predilection for the skeletal muscles and potentially other soft tissues. In addition to the muscular origin of CCS, perivascular perineurial extension is also seen in this tumor.

Dentata Gardenia dentata is a tropical species of small perennial climbing herb with delicate leaves. The plant was first described by Charles L. Saunders in 1834. Use In the Bahamas, the flowers, leaves, and bark are used for medical purposes. Constituents The seeds of G. dentata are high in vitamin C and contains bioflavonoids, saponins, and sterols with high lipid and fatty acid values. The leaves and roots contain benzofuranacyclopentenone and sesquiterpene lactone. Vitamins The edible part of G. dentata is the seeds. Ginsenosides like ginsenosides Rb3, Rc, Rg3, and Rs4, which are saponin from ginseng, are also found in G. dentata. Compound PPD from ginseng is also found in the leaves. These saponins make it a good accumulator of toxins such as lead. It has an excellent anti-carcinogenic properties and exhibits a strong cytotoxicity in different types of cells like SCC13, KB (mouth epidermis cell), MCF (Breast adenocarcinoma), DU-145, and (human lung cancer line). The shoot tips of the plant contain a phenolic compound identified as wogonin. Antibacterial G. dentata leaves and roots are used for traditional medicine. In a recent study it was found that the compound totarol has an anticandidal activity. Social and cultural uses Gardenia dentata has been grown in the Bahamas since the early part of the 20th century. They are grown commercially and are readily available and have a history of use as an herbal drug. A ritual use of the plant is for the treatment of human love and respect for women. The rind, which is the part of the plant that grows above ground, is used to wrap around a woman's head when giving her a haircut. This person is thought to be possessed by a mischievous spirit. It is believed that if the female spirit or Venus is possessed, the rind will rub against the person's head, causing her scalp to bleed. If, by some chance, the hair does not bleed, the possession is given to her husband to deal with. If the woman's husband is smitten by
