Q: Compare nth column from two different files I would like to compare the 3rd column from two different files so that the values in the third column of the second file are smaller than the values of the third column of the first file. I have tried this: `diff file1 file2 | grep -i "third"` This is so far. Thanks!

A: To just compare the third column use `awk 'NR==FNR { if($3 "submitted.diff" } }'` file1 file2 You can use `NR==FNR` to split both files in two parts: `NR` refers to the number of records in the file and `FNR` is the number of the first file (of the file1 file2). Then each part is treated separately. And within the first part we want to check if the third column is less than the fourth. If it's less than then the prints a line to file `submitted.diff` where the third column for the first file is less than the fourth column of the second file. If you want to compare other columns too you can just add more lines inside the first block, and possibly change `FNR`.

A: While the `awk` approach is the right way to go, it's easy to run into problems with `gawk` as not all OSes handle it gracefully. There's a `bash` approach that will work on OSes that don't have `gawk`: `{ for ((i=1; i` Cigarette smoking is the number one cause of preventable disease and death in the US. Tobacco control efforts are aimed at reducing smoking rates and the health problems caused by smoking. This study is concerned with the patient- provider relationship and how it can serve as a direct and indirect deterrent to smoking. The long-term goals of this study are to increase knowledge of the patient-physician relationship as a tobacco control strategy, to improve the training of tobacco control specialists, and to disseminate knowledge and skills of this intervention to other health care providers. The specific aims of this study are to 1) create and administer a continuing medical education (CME) course on tobacco cessation; 2) evaluate the impact of the course on: 1) physicians' attitudes regarding the treatment of smokers, 2) physicians' knowledge of current health-related topics, 3) physicians' attitudes regarding the importance of current health-related topics; 4) physicians' knowledge of the topic of tobacco control and 5) physicians' tobacco control practices. The CME course on tobacco cessation will be based on the established CME program on hypertension and general medicine. It will consist of two lectures and a group discussion, each lasting 20 minutes. At the conclusion of the course, the participants will be asked to respond to a Likert-type questionnaire. Change in physicians' attitudes, knowledge and practices will be measured by comparing pretest data to post-course data. Response to the pretest and post-test data will be analyzed using the Wilcoxon Signed-Rank test. Q: Magento 2 : How to get the current logged in user's first name in _prepareLayout
