Flexible Fabrication of Materials and Devices With High Efficiency of Heat Dissipation. We report a novel wettability gradient- and heat-transfer-facilitated self-aligned method for fabricating metamaterials with flexible functionality. The wettability gradient appears between two nanopatterned nanoparticles and is realized by self-assembly of spherical silicone oil drops on a liquid-liquid interface. The trapped liquid with high wettability at the contact line serves as a latent heat sink that facilitates the subsequent phase transition of another liquid. As a result, the conjugate temperature of another liquid with low wettability was reduced. We experimentally demonstrated the application of wettability gradient in self-aligning and precisely controlling materials and devices, which showed very high efficiency in heat transfer and high reliability. This work introduced an innovative way of realizing various functional materials and devices with self-alignment between materials. to have an operation and a subsequent diagnosis of lung cancer has been reported to reach as high as 50 percent ([@B35]). In addition, most lung cancer-related deaths occur after diagnosis ([@B35]), and one third of all deaths from lung cancer are due to delay in cancer diagnosis ([@B36]). Furthermore, the median survival time for patients diagnosed with lung cancer is only 14 months ([@B37]). Lung cancer has one of the highest rates of all cancers of unknown cause, and lung cancer is the most common cancer-related death in elderly people ([@B38]). Importantly, lung cancer remains the leading cause of cancer death in Japan among both men and women, and the number of lung cancer-related deaths is expected to increase by 70% in 2030 ([@B1], [@B6]). Although the incidence of lung cancer among women has been decreasing in recent years in Japan, it is still the fourth most common cancer among women ([@B39], [@B40]), and the number of lung cancer-related deaths is expected to increase. Therefore, achieving early lung cancer detection using non-invasive screening methods and increasing the rate of early lung cancer detection are important to prevent and reduce the overall burden of lung cancer in Japan. The Japanese Lung Cancer Screening Study (J-LCSS) was developed to evaluate the benefit and effectiveness of lung cancer screening using LDCT among heavy smokers and was conducted in Japan ([@B11], [@B41], [@B42]). Data on the incidence of lung cancer, the mortality due to lung cancer
