A series of exercises and exercises to test knowledge in . Drainage calculations for single-sided, double-sided, and triple-sided PCBs. This paper presents an investigation on the acoustic radiation loss coefficients for double-sided, triple-sided, and single-sided PCBs. The formulas for these coefficients are derived, and are compared with results obtained by using the finite-element method. In addition, a least-squares method has been developed and applied to determine the coefficients of the first mode in three different polarizations of the acoustic field for these types of PCBs. The results of the computational method and the standard finite-element approach are in good agreement.

Q: Using a string to switch between array elements in php I have a long array with two values, stored as

$my_array['some_variable'] = 'something';
$my_array['some_other_variable'] = 'something else';

and I want to use a single variable and a string to switch between the two values. As a concrete example: if ($my_variable = 'something') { $my_array[whatever_string] = 'something'; } else { $my_array[whatever_string] = 'something else'; } I am looking for a function that can take in my_variable and whatever_string and will set $my_array to an array of string $my_array[whatever_string] that correspond to the value of $my_variable. I know I can just create the list of values and assign that list to $my_array, but I am looking for a more elegant 6d1f23a050
